

HOLINESS OF LIFE PRIMARY MISSION OF CHRISTIANITY; Says Archbishop Kaigama

Jan 08, 2018

BOMADI, NIGERIA -

The President of the Catholic Bishops Conference of Nigeria (CBCN), Archbishop Ignatius Kaigama has described holiness of life as the primary mission of the Christian faith as against the present preaching of prosperity and miracles being presently orchestrated by some Christian pastors and Church leaders.

Archbishop Kaigama reemphasized this fact of the Christian faith in his homily at the celebration of the Mass on the occasion of the canonical erection of the Catholic Diocese of Bomadi and the installation of Most Rev. Hyacinth Oroko Egbebo as its Bishop. The ceremony which took place recently at the Our Lady of the Waters Cathedral, Bomadi, Delta State, was performed by the Apostolic Nuncio to Nigeria, Archbishop Antonio Guido Filippazi.

Pointing out that this is the primary evangelization focus of the Catholic Church, the Catholic Archbishop of Jos declared: “At a time when some preachers present Christianity as a project of miracles and prosperity or a matter of cult personality, we owe it a duty to insist that holiness of life, good daily conduct and performance of good works especially helping the weak and the poor irrespective of tribe, status or religious affiliation should be our priority.”

He continued: “Our doors must be wide open to the poor and the underprivileged who ate so many in Nigeria today, especially those lacking the basic necessities of life, those owed months of salaries, retired and grieving pensioners, the army of unemployed youths and the growing numbers who are poor due to no fault of theirs.

Archbishop Kaigama also used the occasion to reiterate the need for government to bring about development at all levels and to look seriously challenges facing the country and the people. Challenges listed by the CBCN President include: the poor conditions of most roads, the incessant strikes by workers in health or educational institutions, the developing culture of mediocrity linked to the god father syndrome or whom you know, the kidnapping of innocent people, etc.

He continued: “Up to now, six Rev. Sisters of the Eucharistic Heart of Jesus are languishing in captivity suffering the terrible traumatic experience many kidnapped persons have undergone.” He pleaded with the kidnappers of the Rev. Sisters and the Postulants to release their victims in the name of Almighty God and in the name of our common humanity.

He also appealed to the faithful to intensify their prayers in this respect. He added: “We also call on the government to respond to the yearnings of the teeming unemployed youths especially here in the Niger Delta - the area that lays the golden egg.”

Advising the people of the newly erected diocese Archbishop Kaigama advocated that in spite of their ethnic diversity, There should be visible unity, a special characteristic of the Catholic Church. His words: “Priests, Religious and the Laity should see the Bishop as a father, a friend and a brother while the Bishop ministers to them as his sons, daughters, friends and co-responsible agents of evangelization.

The ceremony was attended by members of the Catholic Bishops Conference of Nigeria, government functionaries and dignitaries from all walks of life from within and outside the country.
